CURIOSITIES OF FRENCH GARDENING.

The visitor who passes through the markets of Paris cannot fail to be struck by the size and beauty of the fruits and vegetables displayed. There are huge and perfect pears, a glistening array of salads, enormous heads of snowy cauliflower, and giant stalks of asparagus, which attract attention no less for their size and faultless condition, than for vast quantities, all equally fine and large of their kind. These are due to the wonderful skill and patient industry of the French gardeners, who are unequalled by any others, either here or in Europe, in the art of cultivating market produce.

One cause of this superiority is the devotion of the French to specialties. This system obtains as generally among the gardeners as among the men of arts and sciences. An American market farmer or gardener divides his ground into many lots, and plants nearly every variety of truck known to the market. The French gardener gives himself up to the cultivation of a special class or succession of fruits and vegetables, and by long study and practice, by experimenting with various manures, soils, and modes of culture, arrives at the production of a perfect crop of his specialty, season after season, with unerring certainty. He is also much more economical of space and more prodigal of labor than we are, as, in fact, than we need be. He seldom suffers his ground to lie fallow; crop succeeds crop in endless rotation; the cauliflower is set among the melon hills, ready to spread as soon as the melons are gathered. Between the rows of asparagus are planted early potatoes, lettuce, &c., in such a manner as to keep the ground constantly fruitful, and when the weather becomes frosty, and the sun loses a goodly share of its forcing power, large bell glasses are employed, one of which is placed over each plant—especially in the case of the salads—and heat is thus concentrated upon it until its full growth is fairly attained.

The enormous size of the French asparagus is chiefly due to the manner of planting. Instead of setting the plants closely together, as we do, a space of at least six inches square is allowed to each "stool," which enables it to suck a large amount of nutriment from the soil, and become a strong and solid plant. Each stool is also manured repeatedly every season, the soil being carefully scraped away down to the roots; the compost placed around them and the earth put back again.

The French system of cultivating the apple, pear and peach is also peculiar. The trees are all grafted and dwarfed. A strong wire is stretched along in front of each row, about three feet above the ground. Upon this wire a single branch of each tree is trained, and as soon as well started, this branch is made, by heavy pruning, the only fruit-bearing one on the tree. The consequence is that the entire strength of the tree goes to the nourishing of the fruit upon this branch, and this fruit becomes large and fair in proportion. This process, by the bye, is borrowed from the Chinese. The pear, however, is also largely grown in the pyramidal and other forms, but almost always from dwarfed stock.

In the cultivation of the peach, the French gardeners have shown a curious and fanciful skill. Near the town of Montreuil, a few miles only from Paris, there is a large number of gardens, enclosed in whitewashed walls, against the surface of which peach trees are trained in many fanciful forms. One of these is known as the "Napoleon Peach." This is a specimen so trained as to figure in very large letters against the wall the name "Napoleon," a single branch going to the formation of each letter, and the whole surrounded by a wreath composed of two large boughs trained in a circle. There are many other curiosities in French market-gardening and pomology, the details of which are too long for the compass of a single article. These, or some of them, may be spoken of hereafter.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

A correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin speaks of the terrible carnage of the Chinese Taping rebellion, says: One district is described which yielded ninety thousand chests of tea per annum before the war, and is now a desert waste. A belt of land four hundred miles long by two hundred miles wide is left almost an inhabitant.

Seven years ago a St. Louis merchant caught a burglar in his chamber, and let him go on promise of good behavior. That burglar made good, and the merchant failed, and a few days ago the former paid his debt of gratitude by loaning the latter $10,000 with which to start in business again.

The York County (Pennsylvania) Star says that new black wheat is selling in that county at $5 50 per hundred, or $1 50 per quarter. The crop in the lower end of that county is said to be unusually large this season, which will have a tendency to bring down the price.

Our Consul at Palermo, under date of October 1, says, the cholera epidemic has entirely ceased in that city. No new cases had occurred since September 22.

The Ohio wine makers are now busily at work, and the newspapers of that State testify that its wine crop this year will be the largest it has ever had.

A famine in Scandinavia is among the latest misfortunes reported from Europe. Bad harvests last year caused it, and the people are asking for aid from the surrounding countries.

There lives at Detroit a cousin of General Lafayette, by name Joseph Jean Lafayette. He is ninety-four years old, served in the war of 1812, and was wounded at Plattsburg.

The Union Pacific railroad is completed to within seventeen miles of Cheyenne, at the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Without making a useless harangue, I will say to my friends and the public that I am now prepared to supply all of their wants in the way of STOVES. It is time lost to undertake to look for anything better than can be found in my store. I have something new in the way of HEATING STOVES, which cannot be surpassed in style, or beauty of design. To one and all I will say that whoever sell I warrant to answer the purpose I sold it for. I therefore invite my country friends to call and examine my stock of COOKING and HEATING STOVES before purchasing elsewhere, confident that they will not go away displeased. I would also encourage amongst my stock a fine lot of TIN WARE, of my own manufacture, and made by very experienced workmen; also, TINNED SAFES, PRESERVING KETTLES, Fruit Cans, Fine Japanned and Plated Ware and Chamber Sets, to which I would call the attention of the public. Coffee Urns, Tea Urns, Waffle Irons, Children's Toys, and a fine lot of Block Tin Ware and other articles which are too numerous to mention. Thankful for past patronage I hope to have a continuance of the same.
